

"You have a Virus..." Scam

Subject calls you and they report to be from Microsoft (or some other company) and tell you that one of your computers has downloaded some computer virus or malware that is now remotely reporting that you have this issue.

The subject is looking to offer you remote computer repair services that will be paid for by your credit card. They will then remote into your computer and fix your problem. This is usually a scam. Do not let this person remote into your computer or give them any credit card or personal information....

* IMPORTANT NOTE * It is critical however that you do have updated antivirus and/or malware computer software running on any computers or devices that connect to the internet. Otherwise it is very likely you will get a computer virus or malware on your computer or devices.
